This book is part of the Inuuttiarniq Reading Series, developed by the Department of Health in Nunavut. The Inuuttiarniq Reading Series is a unique, Nunavut-developed literacy initiative that infuses Northern values of healthy living and self-care into a culturally appropriate reading program.

The Inuuttiarniq Reading Series was developed to support the reading level guidelines outlined in the Department of Education's Inuktitut guided reading program, Taiguajukhidjutit. Taiguajukhidjutit is a sequential and progressive Inuktitut reading program that supports students in their development from emergent to fluent readers.

Healthy behaviours start at home. Healthy children become healthy adults. For more information, visit www.gov.nu.ca/health and your local Health Centre.

Literacy at Home: Tips for Success

A child's success as a reader is dependent on supportive home and school environments. Reading, and a love of reading, begins at home. The Department of Health has developed a series of levelled take-home books to support reading at home. The following is a list of things you can do to support children as they become fluent readers.

Keep distractions to a minimum. Find a quiet place to read and talk about the book. Even the best readers have a difficult time focusing on reading when there are too many distractions.

Take turns. Read to the child, read with the child, and let the child demonstrate his or her reading skills to you. This will help you provide gentle corrections, and it will provide an opportunity for the child to show you how he or she is improving.

Be patient. When the child is practising to sound out a new word, give him or her time to do so. Remember, learning to read takes a lot of practice, and children learn at their own pace.

Gently correct the young reader. If the child makes a mistake, gently point out the letters he or she has mistaken or overlooked. It is common for beginning readers to guess.

Ask questions. As you read through the book, pause and ask questions about what is going on. This will help the child think about what he or she is reading, and will reinforce reading comprehension.

Focus on successes, not mistakes. All early reading experiences should focus on praising success, as this will build confidence in the child.

Talk about the letters and sounds. Help the child learn the names of the letters and the sounds they make. Point out other things around the house that start with the same sound.

Read it and experience it. If possible, make connections between what the book is about and what happens in life. For example, if the book is about food, talk about food you eat together at home.
